

Notes on Contributing Authors

Follow this and additional works at: <https://research.library.fordham.edu/jmer>

 Part of the Bilingual, Multilingual, and Multicultural Education Commons

Recommended Citation

() "Notes on Contributing Authors," Journal of Multilingual Education Research: Vol. 12, Article 9. Available at: <https://research.library.fordham.edu/jmer/vol12/iss1/9>

This Notes is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at Fordham Research Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of Multilingual Education Research by an authorized editor of Fordham Research Commons. For more information, please contact considine@fordham.edu, bkilee@fordham.edu.

Notes on Contributing Authors

Lorraine Falchi, EdD, is an early childhood educator based in New York City. She supports educators in collaborative coaching partnerships in developing practices as critical practitioners and change agents in learning communities. Her research examines early language, play, and multimodal literacies with a focus on emergent bilingual children's identities. Recent work includes "Learning from Emergent Bilinguals: Mobilizing Translanguaging and Multimodality to Reimagine School Literacy Curricular Spaces," co-authored with Ysaaca Axelrod and Marjorie Siegel in Multimodal Literacies in Young Emergent Bilinguals.

Şerafettin Gedik, PhD, is Assistant Professor of Educational Sciences (K–12 Educational Administration Program) at Amasya University in Amasya, Türkiye. He holds a PhD in K–12 Educational Administration from Michigan State University and an MA in Educational Leadership & Policy Analysis, from the School of Education of the University of Wisconsin–Madison. His research interests revolve around school leadership as it pertains to the issues of equity, social justice, and community engagement. <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-6597-5704>

Elizabeth Gil, PhD, is Assistant Professor in the Educational Leadership, Administration, and Policy Division of Fordham University's Graduate School of Education. Dr. Gil holds a PhD in K–12 Educational Administration from Michigan State University (MSU), where she was a King-Chávez-Parks Future Faculty Fellow. She earned Master's degrees at MSU and at College of Saint Rose. Dr. Gil's research centers on sociocultural contexts of education. She has published articles and chapters investigating how educational leaders can learn from effective leadership practices in community spaces. Her work examines environments that foster family and youth engagement and empowerment and culturally responsive leadership. Dr. Gil has published in Urban Education, Journal of School Leadership, International Journal of Leadership in Education, and International Journal of Mentoring and Coaching in Education. <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-5308-6931>

Dion Efrijum Ginanto, PhD, is currently Lecturer at Graduate School, Islamic State University of Jambi (UIN Sulthan Thaha Saifuddin Jambi), Indonesia. He earned his MA and PhD in K–12 Educational Administration at Michigan State University, U.S.A. His areas of interest include educational leadership, community leadership, social justice leadership, curriculum, and parental engagement/involvement. He has contributed to Indonesian national curriculum improvement/reform. He is the co-author of the academic manuscript for Kurikulum Merdeka (Indonesian national curriculum) as well as the Learning and Assessment Guidance for Kurikulum Merdeka. In addition to his academic world, he also serves as a head of the International Office at UIN Sulthan Thaha Saifuddin Jambi. <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-3080-3651>

Jordan González, PhD, is Assistant Professor at St. John's University and is the Lead Resource Specialist, Long Island Regional Bilingual Education Resource Network (L.I.RBERN). He earned his doctorate in Literacy from St. John's University, where he specialized in language, literacy, and leadership development for Multilingual Learner success. He also earned a graduate degree in Applied Linguistics–Second Language Acquisition from Teachers College, Columbia University. Dr. González began his teaching career as an “English as a Foreign Language” high school teacher in Madrid, Spain. He later worked as an “English as a New Language” and Spanish high school teacher in the NYCDOE before becoming the Director of Language Acquisition K–12 for Yonkers Public Schools. Dr. González has also served as the Conference Chairperson for the 45th Annual NYSABE Conference. His research interests include feedback for L2 writing development, trauma-informed pedagogies, and systems development for Multilingual Learners.

Elizabeth Ijalba, PhD, is Associate Professor, Linguistics and Communication Disorders, Queens College, CUNY. She mentors students through the Bilingual Biliteracy Lab. Her research focuses on dyslexia, autism, and parent-coaching. She co-edited-authored Language, Culture, and Education: Challenges of Diversity in the United States, Cambridge University Press. In 2023 she was awarded the Rehabilitation International Centennial Award for Significant Contributions for her work in advancing the rights and inclusion of people with disabilities worldwide. Dr. Ijalba is a Career Success Fellow at Queens College, CUNY, and is invested in bringing human rights, diversity-equity-inclusion, and cultural humility into clinical settings and education.

Ekaterina Midgette, PhD, is Associate Professor, St. John’s University, New York. She earned her doctorate in Literacy from the University of Delaware, where she specialized in researching planning and revision strategies for adolescent writers. She completed her graduate degree at Moscow State Linguistic University, where she majored in Linguistics and Intercultural Communication. As a former “English as a Foreign and New Language” teacher, Dr. Midgette enjoys working with the adult and preschool through twelfth grade Multilingual Learner Refugee population. Her other research interests include revision processes in argumentative writing and the use of humor in persuasive writing and the reading-writing connection.

Estrella Olivares-Orellana, EdD, is Adjunct Assistant Professor for the Bilingual/Bicultural Program at Teachers College, Columbia University. Her scholarly interests are in the areas of bilingual and bicultural education, mentoring in education, science education in bilingual settings, and the academic experiences of immigrant students. She also works for the Multilingual Department of Uniondale School District in New York. She received a Doctorate in Curriculum and Teaching and a Masters in International Educational Development both from Teachers College, Columbia University. She also received a BS in Biochemistry from SUNY Stony Brook. She is a native of Chile but lived many years in Argentina before migrating to the U.S. in 1994.

Marcela Ossa-Parra, PhD, is a Colombian teacher educator working as an Assistant Professor in the Elementary and Early Childhood Education Department at Queens College–City University of New York. She holds a PhD in Curriculum and Instruction from Boston College. She teaches bilingual education, literacy, and social foundations courses. Her research examines the relationship between identity, language, and literacy to inform the design of curriculum and instruction that centers and expands students' voices. Her studies have been published in TESOL Quarterly, the Journal of Education, and the Journal of Language and Literacy Education. She can be contacted at mossaparra@qc.cuny.edu.

Patricia Velasco, EdD, is retired from Queens College, CUNY, where she was an assistant professor in the Department of Elementary and Early Childhood Education (EECE) and coordinator of the Bilingual Education Program. Her research interests include the development of metalinguistic awareness and its role in biliteracy, teacher education, and understanding the language and educational ideologies of Indigenous Mexicans living in NYC. In 2012, she coordinated the work for NYSED Home and New Language Arts Progressions that were part of the Bilingual Common Core Initiative. Patricia co-directed a project for NYSED creating practices for multilingual learners facing the demands embedded in the New Generation Learning Standards.

Ming Zhu, PhD, is the Founder of Deer Future Education LLC, an educational organization, and the President of Future Education Research Network Inc., a nonprofit research company, both based in Boston, MA. She has closely mentored hundreds of international and domestic students who have since achieved great academic and professional success. Upon receiving her doctoral degree from Fordham University in 2018, she has become a dedicated member of the Journal of Multilingual Education Research and served as an adjunct professor within Fordham's Graduate School of Education. Her research interests include acculturation, multilingual education, multicultural education, and international education.